Poison-resistant Bugs. The insect species popularly known as the Giant Lunar Stinkroach has recently begun to show increased resistance to the most popular pest-control formulation DQT, reports the Southern Hemisphere Environmental Warden's Association. The common but much hated insect is increasing in population despite efforts at control. The Genetic Engineering Directive, which has taken responsibility for...

Maelstrom at Malapert. The Chief Administrator of the Malapert Resort Colony, Jacob Anastasia—also known as 'Nifty Jim'—has gone missing. Provisional Government spokesperson Anito Bargonja has stated for the Tycho Industrialist that Mr. Anastasia's disappearance is in no way associated with rumors of rampant corruption and abuse of young...

Record Asteroid Haul. The Lunar Ship Allgood, flagship of the Merchant Astronaut Corps and constructed from Tycho steel, is reported by the Cislunar Consortium to be on the return leg of its asteroid-mining mission. Rumor has it that the ship is returning with a record-breaking haul of enriched iron and nickel ore, as well several chambers full of platinoid minerals of exceedingly high purity. The Shackleton loan...

Attacked by Bread Dough. A crewmember from the Alliance Ship Kestrel claims that while exploring an unnamed asteroid on a scientific mission, he and other members of the crew were attacked by a reddish-colored mass that had the consistency of bread dough. The crew of the Kestrel were all recruited from the workforce at AFP-allied Malapert Resort, a known haven for recreational drugs. Hallucinations of this...

Computer Phenomenon. The Shackleton Analysis Facility has contacted a Tycho expert with a problem: Shacktown's servers are working too well. Puzzled, the employee ran a diagnostic test, but during the test the servers slowed back down. "It's crazy," stated the unnamed technician. "It's almost as if the computer farm knew it was being tested, but..."
